Saturday Art School Spring 2019: Home

Home: Of or relating to the place where one lives. They say “home is where the heart is” but home is also a place—a place we go to, a place we come from. Home is malleable—we change our homes from time to time as we transition in life because we grow up, because our families change, because we want a different lifestyle, because something has made our homes unsafe. How is it that someplace feels like home? What does it mean to make a new home? How does it feel to go home after an absence? Are homes a given or do we “make” our homes? Is “home” confined to a single building, or can it be as large as a city, region, state, or country? Can the feeling of “home” be attributed to the presence of a specific person? Does our home have a magnetic quality that keeps us centered around that place, either psychologically or physically?
